Meetups

The first action of DevParaná was organizing Meetups, which are informal meetings where people talk about a certain subject, in our case about technology, facilitating the circulation of information and networking.

The idea comes from Silicon Valley, in which events like this are so common like a happy hour.

Affiliates

To a better fit of the developers with the meetups, we encourage the organization of smaller groups, being able to have issues related to these groups, this way the proposed affiliate program.

Today we have 4 affiliates (FEMUG, BEMUG, ReactJS and GDG), which meet at least once a month and meet the criteria set out in by the program.

All our meetups are free and have the support of companies places and educational institutions, which give us the place for the meetings.

Community

Currently, we have three channels where we communicate directly with the developers.

We also use them for pre and post-event dissemination:

Slack

Slack is the busiest of them, which is an open chat tool, and where we have currently more than 950 registered developers. Mostly they use this channel to exchange of experiences, job and events sharing, and also for general subjects related to development doubts, tips and news.

Meetup

Another channel is meetup.com, which does the control sharing of our events, such as also the possibility of sending a list of emails. In this channel, we have more than 1400 developers.

Apoio:

DevParaná In Academy

Aiming to get a closer relationship with educational institutions, we created the In Academy program, which aims to bring content to colleges, helping to train professionals for the market in the region.

This program consists of making talks available to educational coordinators and colleges on the most diverse IT subjects.

Events

Desiring to bring great names of technology to Maringá, on November 26, 2016, we organized the first DevParaná Conference, which had the presence of renowned developers such as Edson Yanaga, Maujor and Jaydson Gomes, and had around 170 developers from throughout the region.

The second edition took place on July 22, 2017, with Edson Yanaga, Otávio Santana, and Jefferson Noronha, and had 220 developers from 17 different cities.

We also hosted two more events: GDG DevFest (November 2017), which is sponsored by Google and focuses on the technologies that it offers, and DevOpsDays (March 2018), which is a worldwide event that has already occurred in more than 40 countries.

Expectations for this year

Our next event is scheduled for July 28, 2018, and we are expecting around 350 developers this time.

Again we will bring 4 invited speakers and we will have 4 other speakers chosen for the call for papers.

In the late April, as soon as the place is confirmed, the ticket sales begin.
